An honest seven-year-old admitted calmly to her parents that Billy Brown had kissed her after class. "How did that happen?" gasped her mother. "Wasn't easy," admitted the young lady, "but three girls helped me catch him."

Some people try to turn back their odometers. Not me, I want people to know "why" I look this way. I've traveled a long way and some of the roads weren't paved.

Near-Nude Figures Appears On Our Streets

Oxford Public Ledger, July 25, 1924
Submitted by Dr. Richard Taylor, Oxford, NC

The Public Ledger does not seek controversy, and there shall be none, as to how our young people should dress, but we fear that some of our young girls are making a sad mistake in riding to and from the bathing pools dressed in bathing suits, with the accompanying display of scant covering for their bodies. We have seen such an exhibition on our streets several times, but the vogue is not indulged here this season with as much persistence as it was last season. Our young girls should at least have as much modesty as did Mother Eve in the Garden of Eden.

Letter Written on Battlefield During Civil War

D.T. Cheatham, a Member Of the Granville Grays, Writes Home From a Camp Near Richmond.

Editor Public Ledger:

From time to time I have read old letters published in newspapers. I have one in my possession that was written in 1862; nearly 69 years ago. Although faded and worn it is beautifully written and every work is legible. This letter was written by D.T. CHEATHAM to my grandfather, Joseph Penn HUNT. My mother, the late Mrs. B.I. BREEDLOVE was a little girl only thirteen years of age when her oldest brother, James A. HUNT, more familiarly called "Jimmy" volunteered at the age of seventeen and enlisted with "The Granville Grays" to leave Oxford with the first company to fight for his country. She kept this letter through the long years of her life as a precious treasure. It is equally as dear to me. There are children and many grandchildren of Joseph Penn HUNT and D. T. CHEATHAM who might read a copy of this letter with interest should you have space to publish it in 'The Public Ledger'.

Upon being notified of his death by his comrades, grandfather sent James B. CREWS, his son-in-law to bring his remains home. There were so many dead and wounded on the battlefield it was seven days before a conveyance could be secured to bring the body from Falvern Hill to Richmond to be shipped to its final resting place. He was the first person ever buried in the cemetery at old historic Salem Methodist Church.

Mrs. S.D. HOLEMAN

The Letter

Camp near Richmond, Va., July 16-1862.

My ever dear Uncle,

Your very kind and affectionate letter of the 10th isn't was rec'd last night and its contents duly noticed and has given me much satisfaction. Uncle, I was very glad to hear that your family was well and doing well. Health is one of the greatest blessings we poor mortals can enjoy. I have been in the army nearly 10 months and never had a day's sickness until after the death of cousin Jimmy, poor fellow who died the next day after the heaviest battle had been fought. Since that time I have had the diarrhea very bad, but am considerably better. Nearly every man is complaining with this disease. James LUMPKIN and Lawson KNOTT are both very sick in the Hospital. Old Mr. DUKE has died, he had a long spell. Uncle, we got back to our old camp last Friday completely broke down and worn out and I never felt as bad in my life. We had a hard time during the progress of the battle. Uncle Joe, you wished me to give you all the particulars of cousin Jimmy's death. Ah, the very thought of this pains my heart to the bottom. I was with him all the time except in the last battle and would have been then but I was detailed to take care of the wounded and could not be in ranks. He fought as bravely as any man ever did and kept as cool as an old warrior, trusting in his Heavenly Father for protection. He was shielded from all harm in the day of battle. During the progress of the battle the most of us lost our blankets and when it was over he came to me and asked me if I had any thing to sleep on. I told him no, he then asked me and Ice BOBBITT to sleep with him which we did, and the next morning he arose and said "we had a fine nights rest boys" and got up throwing the cover back on us and said we could sleep as long as we pleased. He had straightened up and was standing at our feet when he fell backward on us speechless. It alarmed us very much and Alex CREWS as laying by. I told him to see the Dr. but he could not be found. I thought he had fainted and got my canteen and sprinkled a good deal of water in his face and undone his clothes, but he only breathed a few times and expired. We did all we knew but to no avail. And Oh!

My dear Uncle you don't know how bad I felt then. Ten minutes before he was well and gaily and then laying in my arms, a corpse, a from all that was dear to him in this world and in the wild woods. We knew not how nor what to do. In a few minutes we were ordered to fall in line to go we knew where but expected to follow the enemy and to leave him alone. I could not hardly stand it, but we moved back to the rear one mile and a half and took up camp. The colonel was there when he died and seemed to be very much hurt, and after we had camped he told Alex to take as many men as he pleased and go and bury him as good as we could. We did so. Uncle, you spoke of the good example you had set before him and how consoling it was to know that he had benefited by them. That is certainly a great consolation to you. Jimmy was one of the strictest and most devoted Christians I have ever seen in the army. (?) that I was half as good a boy as cousin Jimmy was. I was glad to hear that his remains had reached home safely and had been interred at Salem, and oh! My dear Uncle you can't tell how thankful I am for that good advice you sent me, I am a thousand times obliged to you for your kindness to me. Uncle Joe, I have determined since the battle and especially since the death of cousin Jimmy to lead a better life the Lord being my helper. I hope you all will remember me in your supplications at a throne of grace. I shall always be thankful for your advice for I know it is good. I must close as it is nearly time for drill and I have nothing of interest to write, present my kindness regards to Aunt Martha, cousin Sallie, cousin Sue and all the rest of your family and accept a double portion yourself. My love to cousin Franklin and family also to Uncle George, Aunt Susan and the children, nothing more. Write soon and often to your sincere and loving nephew.

Mix-Up in Marriage

Oxford Public Ledger, March 9, 1923

Submitted by Dr. Richard Taylor, Oxford, NC

A boy 22 Years Old Is His Own Grandfather.

A genealogical contortionist is Peter E. Linsky, of Fertile, Iowa.

At the tender age of 22 he is his own grandfather by all the laws of man. "It was the recent birth of a son that made a fourth dimension necessary to determine Peter's exact position in his family tree.

Eighteen months ago Linsky married a widow with a grown stepdaughter. Linsky's father, a widower, married that stepdaughter. So the younger Mrs. Linsky became the mother-in-law of her father-in-law and the younger Linsky himself found that his stepdaughter was now his stepmother, while his own father was his stepson.

But hold! The elder Linsky's wife gave birth to a son. This son of course was the younger Linsky's half brother; but he was also the grandson of the younger, Mrs. Linsky.

Now enters Peter's own son, practically scrambling the family tree. It makes the wife of the senior Linsky the grandmother of Peter's boy, as well as his stepsister. It makes the senior Linsky some sort of a brother-in-law to his own grandson. It makes the baby the child of Peter's step-grandmother. Peter logically becomes the brother-in-law of his stepmother, while Peter's wife discovers herself as her own child's aunt. The elder Linsky develops into the uncle of his son's child, and the child ending up with Peter Linsky playing grandfather to himself.

Microfilm OxPL, Oxford Day, November 7, 1890, Richard H. Thornton Library, Oxford, NC

A funeral service was being held for a woman who has just passed away. At the end of the service, the pallbearers were carrying the casket out, when they accidentally bumped into a wall, jarring the casket. They heard a faint moan, and opened the casket, and found that the woman was actually alive! She lived for ten more years, and then died. Once again, a ceremony was held, and at the end of it, the pallbearers were again carrying the casket. As they carried the casket toward the door, the husband cried out: " Watch that wall!"
